

Housing Market Fluctuations and the Implicit Price of Water Quality: Empirical Evidence from a South Florida Housing Market

August 2012

Okmyung Bin*

Department of Economics
East Carolina University
Brewster Building A-435
Greenville, NC 27858
bin@ecu.edu
(252) 328-6820

Jeffrey Czajkowski

Wharton Risk Management and Decision Processes Center
University of Pennsylvania
Room 526.7 Huntsman Hall
Philadelphia, PA 19104
jczaj@wharton.upenn.edu
(215) 898-8047

Jingyuan Li

Department of Geological Sciences
Department of Applied Economics and Statistics
University of Delaware
101 Penny Hall
Newark, DE 19716
jingyuan@udel.edu
(302)757-4676

* The authors are respectively, Associate Professor of Economics, East Carolina University; Willis Re Research Fellow, Wharton Risk Management and Decision Processes Center, University of Pennsylvania; and Postdoctoral Researcher, Department of Geological Sciences and Department of Applied Economics and Statistics, University of Delaware. The authors thank Craig Landry and seminar participants at the Southern Economic Association 2011 Annual Meetings and the 2012 Appalachian State University Environmental and Resource Economics Workshop for their helpful comments.